None of the documents cited in the ISR describes a module device in which a connector and a component mounting substrate are connected through a metal lead, wherein the connector, the metal lead, and the electronic component are sealed with the same thermosetting resin such that the state thereof prior to curing is in solid state at a temperature of 40°C or less and the sealing is so formed that the thickness of the resin that seals the electronic component varies according to the height of each electronic component. Furthermore, this feature is not obvious to a person skilled in the art.
